SUBJ: U.S. - CHINA MILITARY-TO-MILITARY PROGRAM

SUMMARY: Military-to-military relations focused on transparency, reciprocity, mutual respect and understanding are vital to U.S. engagement strategy. A system of routine contacts can weather Sino-U.S. disagreements in other areas.

KEY POINTS

- * Urge counterpart visits and PLA participation in multinational symposia
- * Ship visits, to include continuing Hong Kong port calls, are opportune contacts
- * We support bilateral PASSEX, SAREX, and humanitarian/disaster relief exercises
- * Functional visits focusing on mutual learning will forge stronger relationship

DISCUSSION

- * Encourage expanded Chinese participation in multinational symposia
 -  USCINCPAC sponsored: Asia-Pacific Center, Logistics Seminar, Mil Ops and Law
 -  USARPAC: Pacific Armies Management Seminar; Military Medical Conference
 -  PACAF: Airmen's Symposium; Pacific Rim Air Doctrine Symposium
 -  PACFLT: Operational Medical Symposium; International Seapower Symposium
- * Continuing USN ship visits following Hong Kong's reversion will significantly increase routine U.S.-China mil-to-mil contact
- * Reciprocal ship visits as PRC deems appropriate can also be offered again
- * Bilateral PASSEX, SAREX or humanitarian/disaster relief exercise should be conducted with PRC
 -  Anticipate China MOD visit to U.S. and Hawaii in Dec. will further mil to mil opportunities
 -  OSD has proposed to PLA that bilat exercise be conducted in 1998
 -  USCINCPAC counterpart visit to Hawaii likely in Spring 1997
 -  China likely to accept offer to send small technical team (Jan 97) to explain generic USN ship visit procedures
- * Functional visits focusing on mutual learning will forge stronger relationship

BOTTOM LINE: Many activities to productively routinize the U.S.-China mil-to-mil relationship are possible. Stronger mil-to-mil relationships with China will better secure peace and prosperity in the Pacific.
